Market Based Pricing... is now back at ProTeam due to a one time year end (2010) write-down of inventory costs to mirror current market replacement. This was an almost one million dollar adjustment that would put most businesses "out of business" but our accounting and banking partners agreed that this was needed to put us on a competitive footing with those who were not stuck with much inventory at the beginning and during the "Great Recession". Beth has redone the prices at ProTeam's website and the window of opportunity is now open for our astute clients. If you have been grazing the ProTeam site and thought a car was just beyond your reach, check it again. We can almost guarantee a change that will have you think again about buying your first or next Corvette from ProTeam. Special note: Rare is still rare... and you will see little change as it relates to single, double, and triple digit production Corvettes. Visit ProTeamCorvette.com if you're in the market for a Corvette or email terry@proteamcorvette.com.

Legitimate cars with legitimate components and legitimate documentation are becoming harder to find. Did you know that there is a database of Corvette VIN numbers (over 400) that are not authentic/legitimate and most information came from inspections of these cars at collector car auctions or judged events?

How does one compare the value of a black 1967 with a blue 1967 when GM made so few black Corvettes in 1967? Did you know that option combinations make certain legitimate Corvettes very hard to find and desirable? Legitimacy is and will be the benchmark for value and investment.

Who does your authentication, due diligence and pre-purchase inspections? Are they qualified? Do they know the difference between real and memorex?

There IS a big difference between a ProTeam Corvette and a typical auction Corvette (live or internet) in that our cars were inspected and authenticated by very knowledgeable people with roots within the Bloomington and NCRS organizations. We did your due diligence and authentication for you and have a brain trust of cubic Corvette knowledge* at our fingertips and have many specific school room examples that go way past the various judging guides and their typical factory production (TFP) standard.

How do you compare one Corvette with another on eBay or an auction TV show if you're not there? Comments, email: terry@proteamcorvette.com
